

"We shared a good three minutes together, just looking at each other, so we definitely have more connection than before."

"It's kind of calming. She has a more unique eye color, so I was just observing the subtleties of her face."

"Awkward, but not in a bad way. I appreciated the fact that we could only look at each other and not say anything."

"I was paying attention to the fact that the whole time, she was staring back at me, and a third of my time I spent thinking about what she was thinking about me. I think I was highly aware and cognizant. "

"[About Charlie Rose interview with Bill Murray] He says, 'I wish I could be in the moment. I wish I could look in the mirror and just accept myself,' and I was just thinking 'shit...I don't know how to do that.' This experiment reminded me of that."

"Pulchritudinous. Just a long-winded way of saying beautiful...just extreme, physical beauty."

"It was pretty intimate."

"It was really cool, but it was really hard to do it. You never think about how hard it is to make eye contact with strangers."

"It gets to the point where you start to connect with each other just through the facial expressions."

"It's like a weird level of comfort that you can have with a stranger."

"I felt like I got very close to her very fast and in a non-traditional way."

"I'm surprised how quickly this went by. It felt very comfortable."